

Individual Contributor Career Ladder

Five competencies mapped across P1 – P5 levels

Competency	Associate / Coordinator	Specialist	Senior / IC Manager	Staff / Lead / IC Sr. Manager	Principal / IC Director
	P1	P2	P3	P4	P5
Expertise General experience and knowledge necessary for the level	You are developing the core skills needed for this role because you are doing it for the first time. You work closely with your direct manager and are given detailed direction.	You are a meaningful contributor of a wide range of tasks under direct supervision and guidance. You have the functional core skills needed for the role.	You have strong core skills needed for the role. You are a significant contributor under minimal direction. You are seen as an expert in at least 1 area.	You have the fully developed core skills needed for the role. You can lead major projects or initiatives with minimal direction.	You have superior core skills needed for the role. You are an expert in your field. You can lead multiple major projects at a time while mentoring others.
Scope of Influence Who you work with daily, the autonomy you have, and the complexity of your work	You work closely with your manager and more senior members of your direct team to support their work. The impact of your work is felt on pieces of projects.	Your work directly impacts your team, and potentially a few others when projects overlap. You maintain existing processes or features.	You partner with peers and managers across multiple functions. You work on medium to large projects that impact your entire team, and potentially a few others when projects overlap.	You partner with peers and strategize with senior leaders, and you are known as a functional leader. You work on increasingly complex projects that impact entire departments and are felt potentially across the company.	You have the influence to work across the entire business and you are recognized by all as an impactful contributor.
Delivering Results Your day to day. Your ability to apply strategic thinking to your work	You are learning how to approach your work, gather feedback, and prioritize tasks. You learn by frequently checking in with your manager or senior members of the team. You have the confidence to complete simple tasks on your own in a timely manner.	You drive clearly defined small projects to completion. You are starting to be able to estimate the time and effort it takes to complete your tasks. You improve the way your team ships. You suggest small improvements and/or commit improvements directly in your team's workflows.	You define and break work down into logical pieces, resolving problems as they occur. You are seen as a role model for quality on your team. You actively contribute to your team's strategy. Your work continually references your team's goals, and you can relate it back to the long-term goals of the business.	You are able to assess costs and tradeoffs. You anticipate future problems and own solutions. You take ownership of your team reaching business outcomes. You identify metrics as measures of success and can connect your work back to business objectives.	You drive and own complex decisions that impact the entire business. You manage and define solutions for vague or ambiguous problems.

Competency	Associate / Coordinator	Specialist	Senior / IC Manager	Staff / Lead / IC Sr. Manager	Principal / IC Director
	P1	P2	P3	P4	P5
Teamwork & Communication Your ability to write, speak, and collaborate	You effectively communicate progress and status updates to your team. You are developing your ability to give feedback to your peers.	You collaborate effectively and provide quality feedback to your manager and team. You demonstrate the autonomy it takes to be successful in a remote role, meaning you know when to ask for help before struggling for too long on your own.	You proactively request feedback and you are open to constructive criticism. You lead and direct group conversations around complex problems.	You are seen as a go-to person who provides guidance across the team. You improve how your team communicates by defining processes, standards and best practices, and new ways of working. You actively participate in the development of others through mentorship.	You are able to distill the most complex topics into simple language that anyone can understand. You create a safe environment for others to participate in discussions. You are a clear and effective communicator that is respected across the business.
Values & Guiding Principles The ability to understand, demonstrate, and apply company values to your work	You understand company values and demonstrate them through your behaviors.	You exemplify company values and you are able to identify corresponding behaviors in others.	You exemplify company values and you actively encourage others to demonstrate them.	You exemplify company values and you hold others accountable by promoting and celebrating corresponding behaviors.	You are a role model and a culture leader who exemplifies core values.